Master Class on ESG

1st August 2026

9:30 AM to 1:30 PM

TARGET AUDIENCE: Senior Executives, Province Heads, BMs, RMs and Other Banking Professionals .

About

As environmental, social, and governance (ESG) considerations increasingly influence banking regulations, investment decisions, and stakeholder expectations, financial institutions are expected to integrate sustainability into their business strategies and risk management frameworks. Climate change, environmental degradation, and social risks are no longer viewed solely as ethical concerns but as material financial risks that directly affect credit quality, operational resilience, reputation, and long-term profitability. At the same time, sustainable finance presents significant opportunities for banks to support green investments, foster resilient economic growth, and create long-term value. This executive-level program is designed to provide banking leaders with global perspectives and practical insights on climate and social risks, green financing opportunities, challenges in measuring sustainability, and international ESG best practices. Through expert presentations by an international academic and an experienced Nepalese banking professional, participants will gain practical knowledge to strengthen their institutions' sustainable finance initiatives and align with emerging global and national sustainability expectations.
